When our sons were small, we began taking turns saying the blessing at dinner. One evening our 3 yr-old son mumbled so much I couldn't understand a word. "I can't hear you," I told him. "I wasn't talking to you." He replied.

I could tell our multitasking age was rubbing off on my children when 6yr-old Brita reported: "I think I'm going to be a good cook, Mom, I just shut the dishwasher with my knee!"

Our 9yr-old son, Evan, thought he was old enough to be making his own decisions. One evening, during a frustrating discussion, my husband pointed to our kitchen door and said, "See that door there?"

"Yes," Evan replied.

"When you're old enough to walk out that door and live on your own; you can make your own decisions."

Puzzled, Evan asked, "Why can't I use the front door?"

Once, while walking my granddaughter home from school, she exclaimed; "Grandma, I have a loose tooth! That means I'm growing up, doesn't it?" "Yes," I said. "Soon you'll have adult teeth." "Then I'll be just like you." Caitlin replied with satisfaction. "Only, you can leave yours at home."

Returning home from her first day at her first job, my 15 yr-old excitedly told me her salary and about her benefits, and that she could charge anything that she bought and that it would be deducted from her pay. When I told her not to let the charging get out of control, she just rolled her eyes. A couple of weeks later she got her first cheque. "Well, I asked, "how much? She stared out the window of the car for a moment, and then replied. "I owe them $5.74.

My two children were arguing as we drove home. Tired, I turned to them and said, "I hope when you grow up you have children just like you."

"It won't matter to me," my seven-year-old son said. "I'll be at work all day."

While a friend and I waited to be seated for lunch, I noticed a man staring at her. I joked he was "undressing her with his eyes." My friend looked over at him, and then said to me, "I wish he'd given me some warning. I could have held my stomach in."

One morning my father and older brothers undertook a repair job on one of our farm trucks. By late afternoon, tired of my youngest brother Rick's repeated requests to help, Dad told him he could help when he got older. Walking away dejected, head hanging low, Rick's reply was barely audible. "Yeah, but by the time I get older, you'll have it fixed."

Newly married, my husband and I had had several heated discussions concerning the division of household chores. I complained that I was doing the lion's share. Not long after, I returned home and found every second room vacuumed, the dishes washed, and the laundry done and folded. I was even more touched to find "I LOVE YOU" drawn in the dust on every second shelf of the bookcases.

Relaxing outside, I suddenly heard shouts of "Kool-Aid for Sale!" My girl, Rianne and her girlfriend Debbie were across the street calling this to every car that stopped at the corner. After awhile, I was weary of it. I went over and gave them each $5. to quit yelling "Kool-Aid for sale!" "They happily agreed. I had just settled comfortably back in my lounge chair when I heard, "Lemonade for sale, ten cents a glass!"

A couple was taking their 16 yr.-old daughter to the hospital to have a tonsillectomy. During the ride they were taking about the procedure.

"Dad," the teen asked.

"How are they going to keep my mouth open during surgery?"

Without hesitation her father quipped, "They're going to give you a phone."

Eight months pregnant and plagued with a cold. I was seriously deprived of sleep. My four yr-old sensing my inability to focus, came over and sat in what remained of my lap. "Mommy," she said, wrapping her arms around me, "I have a secret for you."

My heart swelled at her love despite my inattention. I leaned forward to catch her words.

"Mommy," she whispered in my ear, "you're fired."

After washing her kitchen floor, my daughter warned her four yr-old son not to go in until it was dry. Moments later she heard noises coming from the kitchen.

"Brad, I told you not to go in there!" she hollered.

"Its okay, Mom," he yelled back.

"I've got my rubber boots on!"
